ESTA Authorization

ESTA authorization is issued to persons planning to travel for tourist or business purposes, which correspond to a B1/B2 visa. Once approved, it is valid for two years from the date of issue or until the passport expires, if earlier. It allows you to enter the US multiple times without having to re-apply for a permit. During one entry, you can stay in the US for a maximum of 90 days, and the interval between subsequent trips should be long enough to minimize the risk of suspicion of attempts to live in the US, although there is no specific break between visits.

A new ESTA is required if:

- a new passport was issued (also a temporary one)
- the applicant has changed his name and/or surname
- the applicant has changed gender
- the applicant has changed the country covered by the visa waiver program
- other circumstances occur, such as a sentence, serious illness, which cause a change of the "yes" or "no" answers provided in the application
